FROM THE DIRECTOR

A new millennium has begun but the challenges for the criminal justice system and this Office remain much the same as they have for the last decade. I am pleased to report the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (the 'ODPP') has performed extremely well in the last year in responding to the demands of courts, police, victims and the community. This has been due as ever to the professionalism and dedication of the office staff but there has also been a significant improvement in the development of structures and policies under the guidance of General Manager Rosemary Markotic. The restructure of the office and an influx of talented young legal staff have ensured that the day to day operation of the ODPP has been responsive and efficient. Again the support of the Attorney-General's Department has been excellent, particularly in the areas of corporate services, human resources and policy. My relationship with the Attorney-General, the Honourable K Trevor Griffin MLC, was cordial and supportive as has been the case for our respective terms. We wish him well on his retirement at the next election. In particular he has been very supportive in several long cases conducted during the year which were not funded by legal aid as the cap had been exceeded. These trials could not have proceeded without government assistance, but there is a real danger that an expectation will be created that the government will always step in when legal aid is not forthcoming. This is not and cannot be the case. This Office has no role in such funding other than to ensure such cases are prosecuted efficiently and expeditiously but a similar responsibility rests with the legal profession to ensure public funds are not expended needlessly on fanciful defences or hopeless challenges to prosecution evidence. Such exercises would not be undertaken by a prudent self-funded litigant so restrictions on defence counsel to advise and act in similar prudent fashion, do not constitute an infringement of an accused's rights.

The murder trial of Karger was one such trial. The trial ran over seven months with some 118 sitting days. The defence involved a challenge to DNA evidence which was an important part of the prosecution case. The challenge involved calling interstate and overseas experts and accordingly became an extremely expensive and ultimately fruitless exercise. My concerns are not to limit defences but rather that the trial was needlessly prolonged identifying issues which could have been avoided by the defence disclosing expert reports as each party is required to do in the civil jurisdiction. The proposed legal representation legislation should go some way to addressing the problem of the unfunded unrepresented accused. In the meantime we need to work towards a system which delivers the most efficient and economical trial process without detracting from the rights of the accused or affecting the fairness of a trial. This may require some concessions from defence such as the disclosure of expert reports but will always require the prosecution to act with scrupulous fairness particularly in fulfilling disclosure obligations.

During the year I represented the Office at the International Association of Prosecutors (IAP) Conference in Capetown, South Africa in September 2000 and also at the Heads of Prosecuting Agencies Conference (HOPAC) in Edinburgh, Scotland in May 2001. Both conferences demonstrated the remarkable commonality of problems and challenges faced by prosecuting authorities in all jurisdictions and provided valuable insight into best practice solutions. They also provided a unique opportunity to network with offices around the world which is becoming a necessity with the globalisation of crime.

I would like to express my appreciation and gratitude to everyone I have worked with over the last year. In particular I would like to thank the Attorney-General, Trevor Griffin, my executive group, Associate Director Wendy Abraham QC, Managing Solicitor Pauline Barnett, Managing Prosecutor Trish Kelly and General Manager Rosemary Markotic as well as all the staff of the ODPP who have performed extremely well in the face of ever increasing pressures, with a special mention in this regard for the Witness Assistance Service under Manager, Filomena Merlino. The people of South Australia can be justifiably proud of the work done by this Office. Finally to my Executive Assistant Jackie Wake, many thanks for her tireless support without which I could not function.

STRATEGIC OVERVIEW

Mission Statement

To provide the people of South Australia with an independent and effective criminal prosecution service which is timely, efficient and just.

Vision

The Director and staff are committed to providing a criminal prosecution service which:

- ~ applies the highest ethical and professional standards instituting, and where necessary terminating, proceedings without fear or favour in order to provide public confidence in the administration of justice within South Australia;
- ~ is recognised for its independence, professionalism and standards of excellence;
- ~ endeavours to deal with victims of crime with sensitivity and respects their special needs; and
- ~ strives for excellence, efficiency and effective communication in its work with police, the courts and other entities within the criminal justice system.

Values

The values that shape the work of the Office are:

- ~ the highest standard of ethical and professional conduct, objectivity, honesty and sensitivity;
- ~ full public accountability for the quality of service provided by the Office and for the administration of public funds;
- ~ a commitment to excellence by regular review and continuous improvement of its performance;
- ~ a commitment to the promotion of competence and professionalism in staff through training and continuous staff development; and
- ~ sensitivity to and understanding of the needs of victims and witnesses.

Goals for 2000-2001

Through 2000-2001, the goals of the Office continued to be:

- ~ To ensure the timely and just resolution of criminal cases and to contribute to improving the operation of the criminal justice system by:
 - a) ensuring that the Office and the police work co-operatively in the effective collection, processing and presentation of evidence to courts;
 - b) recognising the special needs of victims of crime and ensuring that victims are well informed about the prosecution process; and
 - c) ensuring that Crown witnesses are well informed about the prosecution process and to minimise any inconvenience occasioned by their appearance in court.
- ~ To ensure that the Office acts in an independent manner that maintains the confidence of the people of South Australia in its prosecution service;
- ~ To further develop management systems that facilitate efficient and effective operations of the functions of the Office.

Organisational Performance Monitoring (including Budget)

The Office returned a surplus for the 2000-2001 year. The budgeted expenditure was $6 m.

The introduction of output budgeting has resulted in a requirement to report performance information as part of the budget process. The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions contributes to output 2.1 Legal Services as part of the Justice Portfolio budget papers. The performance information for the current period is:

OUTPUT:	2.1 LEGAL SERVICES
Description:	This output includes legal advice, disputation, prosecutorial, commercial and property legal services.
Performance Indicators:	Descriptions	Expected activity 2000-2001	Actual for 2000-2001	Expected activity level for 2001-2002
Quantity	No. of matters finalised by the Committal Unit	1,000	1,320	1300
	No. of defendant files finalised by the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	700	898	850
	No. of clients seen by the Witness Assistance Service	350	497	450
Quality	Percentage of matters committed through the Committal Unit in which the DPP enters a nolle prosequi after committal	<10%	7.8%	<10%
	Percentage of committed matters which are finalised by a guilty verdict or guilty plea	>70%	73%	>70%
	Percentage of referring agencies who rate the standard of service by the Witness Assistance Service as high	85%	85%	85%
Timeliness	Percentage of trials where the ODPP meets the court timetable requirements for the trial list	95%	92%	95%
Cost	Total Cost	$6.0m	$6.0m	$6.6m

Organisational restructure

In November 2000, the Office undertook an internal organisational review aimed at improving service delivery outcomes and identifying more effective staffing and structural arrangements. A wide ranging consultation process with representation from all sections within the Office was conducted to ensure a broad range of key issues were examined and appropriately addressed.

As part of the recommendations of the review, the Committal Unit was restructured. Although the review supported the need for the Committal Unit function to remain a largely autonomous one, the review did highlight the need for significant changes to be made to the management structure of the Unit. As a result of these changes, a more efficient and streamlined process has been implemented, avoiding the practice of the unnecessary double-handling of files, particularly at the management level.

The organisational chart (Appendix A) provides further information on the discrete units within the Office.

Management Structure

The decision-making processes for the strategic and major operational issues continue to be dealt with in the overall Office Management Framework. This framework consists of two major Committees, the Executive Committee and the Management Committee.

EXECUTIVE

The Executive Committee is comprised of:

- Director
- Associate Director
- Managing Solicitor
- Managing Prosecutor
- General Manager

The Executive is chaired by the General Manager, meets fortnightly and has overall responsibility for the establishment, implementation and evaluation of the strategic direction of the Office. It has final responsibility for policy and will also determine the appropriate response to the important legal issues affecting the Office generally.

MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE

The Management Committee is comprised of:

- Managing Solicitor
- Managing Prosecutor
- General Manager
- Senior Solicitors
- Senior Prosecutors
- Manager, Witness Assistance Service
- Administration Manager

The Management Committee is chaired by the General Manager and meets monthly. It has responsibility for operational issues including accommodation, information technology, staffing movements, finance proposals, co-ordination of business planning, performance management and enterprise bargaining issues. On a number of issues, the Management Committee will be required to forward proposals to Executive for final approval.

SERVICE DELIVERY

Adjudication Services

Adjudication services are provided by the Committal Unit Section of the ODPP. The Committal Unit has moved in this financial year from Wright Street where they were located with the Criminal Justice Section for Adelaide and Sturt SAPOL to the main office of the ODPP in Pirie Street. They have, however, continued the formal arrangement with SAPOL Criminal Justice Sections serviced by the Committal Unit in the metropolitan area, to adjudicate charges to be laid in court after police have arrested a person on a major indictable offence. In such cases, arresting police formulate draft charges and forward a brief to the local Criminal Justice Section (Adelaide, Sturt, South Coast, Port Adelaide, Holden Hill, Elizabeth) where a police prosecutor checks the brief to ensure there is some evidence to provide the consideration of major indictable charges. The file is then delivered or faxed to the Committal Solicitor who considers the appropriateness of the draft charges. If necessary, the charges will be redrafted. The Criminal Justice Section is then advised what charges, if any, should be laid in court. This process is undertaken before the defendant's first appearance in the Magistrates Court which will occur if bail has been refused on the morning after arrest. Thus the decision as to the appropriate charges must be made on the basis of the limited information about the information which is available at that stage. It may be reviewed at a later stage once all the evidence has been received.

There has been a significant increase in the number of adjudications undertaken by the Committal Unit in the past year. In the previous year there were 757 adjudications. This year there were 1207 adjudications. At this early stage of the prosecution process approximately one-quarter of these charges have been diverted from the superior courts by the laying of minor indictable or summary charges which can be finalised in the Magistrates Court. The significant increase in the number of adjudications is due to a number of factors, but the most significant factor is the introduction of the offence of Aggravated Serious Criminal Trespass. This has had the effect of requiring the ODPP to adjudicate on all matters in which there has been a home invasion or a house breaking with aggravating circumstances or a break-in in to a non-residential building with aggravating circumstances.

With the move of the Committal Unit back to the main office, it has been necessary to receive adjudications by fax. Most of the material is faxed to the ODPP early in the morning so that a person can appear in court at the earliest time available for the court to set the hearing.

In addition to the metropolitan adjudications, a number of matters are received from country areas including those to which the ODPP and courts conduct a circuit District and Supreme Court. A number of matters are adjudicated by the circuit solicitor and it is determined whether these matters can be dealt with summarily and finalised in the Magistrates Court.

Legal Advice

During each year, the Office receives a large number of requests from SAPOL for legal advice, predominantly as to the appropriate charges, if any, to be laid in cases investigated by police. Advice will only be provided after an examination of the complete police brief, containing all statements and an account of any interview with the alleged offender. If an examination of the brief reveals that further investigation is required, the brief will ordinarily be returned to police for that to occur before advice is provided.

A solicitor then evaluates the available evidence to determine, in accordance with the ODPP Prosecution Policy, whether and which charges should be laid. Advice is then provided in writing.

SAPOL Prosecution Policy Number 7 prescribes the nature of matters which should be referred for advice:

Proceedings which are of unusual importance, significance or sensitivity or involve a witness the subject of the Witness Protection Act or involve serious crime or complex issues of law or fact are to be referred to the DPP, through the Officer in Charge, Prosecution Services Branch, for information, assistance and/or advice. All such matters are to be accompanied by a covering report outlining the reasons for referral to the DPP.

This Policy further provides a general discretion about such referrals but requires certain categories of cases to be referred. These include in particular:

- 1 Cases involving a potential conflict of interest for SAPOL to prosecute, such as offences allegedly committed by close friends or relatives of a SAPOL employee and also where offences have allegedly been committed by persons with a high public profile, such as Members of Parliament;
- 2 Major and/or complex drug offences;
- 3 Any case where a Court has invited/suggested such a referral;
- 4 Sexual offences where a Court conducting a committal has ordered that a complainant be called to give evidence during a committal. (Referrals of this nature will only come from SAPOL Prosecution Units in the country, as the DPP conducts such proceedings in the suburban courts in any event);
- 5 Sexual offences involving child victims where:
 - a) it is uncertain whether criminal charges should be laid;
 - b) admissibility of evidence is in question;
 - c) pressure to prosecute is being applied by parents, guardians, other interested parties, or government departments, and it is believed by SAPOL prosecutors that there is insufficient evidence to proceed;
 - d) SAPOL prosecutors believe that there is little or no reasonable prospect of securing a conviction despite the statements showing a prima facie case;
 - e) leave has been granted during a committal hearing to call the child to give evidence. (Again, this will only be required in country areas as in the suburban courts the DPP Committal Unit would be conducting the committal in any event.)
- 6 Any case in which significant difficulties are experienced during committal hearing, including abuse of process allegations. (Again, this is relevant only to committals in country courts.)
- 7 Any case involving a witness for the prosecution who is subject to the Witness Protection Act 1996.
- 8 Any other matter deemed proper for referral by the Officer in Charge of the SAPOL Prosecution Services Branch including, in particular where there is an actual or possible conflict of interest, or where an inappropriate approach has been made, or unwelcome pressure applied, to compromise a SAPOL adjudicator, prosecutor, other police officer, or a lawful process.

In practice, many other cases are also referred by SAPOL to the ODPP for advice. Where an alleged offender has not been arrested but instead has been reported on a charge of a major indictable offence in an area serviced by the Committal Unit, such files are routinely referred and advised upon. In the case of persons arrested and charged with major indictable offences, the file goes through the adjudication process dealt with in this Report under "Adjudication Services".

This ensures at the outset that appropriate charges are laid and that cases are identified which can be appropriately dealt with by less serious charges in the Magistrates Court or which ought not to proceed at all.

In a case which is likely to depend on the assessment by a jury of the credibility of a witness, the ODPP lawyer preparing the advice will meet with the witness to assess his or her ability to give evidence and considering all available evidence there is a reasonable prospect of conviction. This is particularly important in sexual cases where it is usually critical to the outcome that the jury unreservedly accepts the truthfulness and accuracy of the complainant's account. An early meeting with the complainant allows the true prospects of success of the case to be properly assessed by an experienced prosecutor. It is also an opportunity for victims in sexual cases to be introduced to the prosecuting authority, to be informed about the legal process and to meet with an ODPP Witness Assistance Officer, who can help the witness deal with the prosecution process. The Witness Assistance Officer can also assist the complainant to understand if the decision is made not to proceed. In some cases, information and documentation provided to victims in sexual cases during such meetings assists them to decide that they do not wish to endure the prosecution process. Whilst in recent years there have been developments in the Criminal Justice System which improve the position of victims of sexual offences, it remains an unfortunate fact that such cases have a lower rate of conviction, both Australia wide and in South Australia, than cases of non-sexual offences. The provision of advice to police, prior to the charging of alleged offenders with sexual offences, assists victims of these offences to know at an early stage whether a case will proceed and to understand the reasons for these decisions.

The Office also provides legal advice in relation to major fraud cases through the Fraud Unit of the Solicitor Section. Advice is given at an early stage in some matters to assist SAPOL in determining how the matter will proceed, what further investigations are necessary to ensure that the matter is adequately prepared and the appropriate charges are laid. A close liaison is then maintained throughout the conduct of the matter and reviewed as necessary.

There is also an arrangement with the Major Crash Investigation Section of SAPOL that motor collision cases in which death or serious injury have been caused will be referred for advice, prior to the laying of charges, except in cases where it is clear that a charge of causing death by dangerous driving or causing grievous bodily harm by dangerous driving should be laid.

During the year the Office provided advice as to the appropriate charges, if any, to be laid in 596 cases. This represents a slight increase in the number from last year. Of the 596 cases, 144 were determined to be major indictable offences. In the balance of 452 it was determined that the appropriate charges could be laid in the Magistrates Court or that no charges at all should be laid.

Committal Services

The ODPP conducts committal proceedings where major indictable offences have been charged in the Magistrates Courts at Adelaide, Holden Hill, Elizabeth, Port Adelaide and Christies Beach. Committal proceedings will also be held where a person charged with a minor indictable offence has elected for a trial by jury.

The majority of these committals are conducted by the Committal Unit, except cases of murder and some complex drug cases, which are conducted by the Solicitor Section. Major fraud case committals are conducted by the Fraud Unit within the Solicitor Section. During the committal proceedings, the prosecution case is disclosed to the person charged by filing in the Magistrates Court the statements of witnesses and other materials upon which the prosecution is founded. A copy of those materials is provided to the person charged or to his or her legal representatives. Prosecution witnesses will not ordinarily be called to give evidence during committal proceedings but this may occur where a magistrate finds that special reasons exist to do so. If a magistrate finds, on a consideration of the statements filed in the Court and any evidence taken, that there is sufficient evidence to put a defendant on trial, the defendant is then committed for trial to the District Court or the Supreme Court. Alternatively, if the defendant pleads guilty to the charge during committal proceedings the magistrate will commit that person to be sentenced in the District Court or the Supreme Court.

During committal proceedings, the ODPP continues to consider the appropriateness of the charges laid, upon review of the declarations and other evidence supplied, then identifies and negotiates at this stage to resolve appropriate cases by way of pleas of guilty to appropriate lesser charges which can be finalised in the Magistrates Court. Early intervention by the Committal Unit also identifies matters which, although not finalised by guilty pleas, may proceed on appropriate lesser charges in the Magistrates Court or which should not proceed at all. This ensures that the superior courts are not called upon to deal with criminal cases which may be appropriately and more economically dealt with in the Magistrates Courts.

A concern that was raised in the last Annual Report and continues to be an issue are the number of committals which take significantly longer than the court imposed standard of 10 weeks because of the failures by SAPOL investigators, in some cases, to deliver all statements of witnesses in sufficient time to be filed and served in the Magistrates Court. This is, in part, a resource issue for SAPOL and the ODPP is working with the SAPOL to ensure that there is compliance with the timeline. In the past year we have worked closely with the brief management project that has been instigated by the Commissioner of Police to look at the performance of investigators in collating the evidence for presentation in court. It is recognised that there is a major training issue to be addressed by SAPOL in the coming years in relation to the gathering and presentation of evidence in the written form and when they are called upon to give evidence before the courts.

During the year the Committal Unit dealt with the committals of 1320 defendants, an increase of 173 on the previous year. Of these matters, 566 were committed for trial and 108 were committed for sentence to the superior courts. The balance of 646 did not proceed to the superior courts due to the intervention of the Committal Unit. The Fraud and Solicitor Sections conducted a further 63 committals. That constitutes a total of 1383 committals conducted by the ODPP in the year 2000-2001.

Summary of Committal Unit Outcomes 2000-2001

Committed for sentence	108	8.18%
Committed for trial as charged	566	42.88%
Resolved Summarily	321	24.32%
Tendered No Evidence (TNE)	205	15.53%
TNE - Drug Assessment Aid Panel	11	0.83%
Referred to Drug Court	27	2.05%
Other	82	6.21%
Total	1320	100.00%

COMMITTAL UNIT OUTCOMES - 2000-01

Solicitor Services

The Solicitor Section has the responsibility for all files that are committed for trial in the superior courts. The Committal Unit prior to committal assesses the matters in the metropolitan area. There are also a significant number of matters that come from country areas where SAPOL has had the conduct of the earlier court appearances. In order to accommodate the court matters the Solicitor Section has two solicitors assigned to these matters. In the absence of the screening and review of the Committal Unit these files require a more intensive initial assessment that on occasions results in matters being referred back to the Magistrates Court and appropriate charges being disposed of in that jurisdiction.

Murder and some complex drug files come to the Section prior to committal. In addition to these general areas the Section has specialised units dealing with fraud, confiscations of profit and policy.

Upon assuming conduct of the files it is the responsibility of the Solicitor Section to:

- ≈ assess all files;
- ≈ lay charges that adequately reflect the nature and extent of the criminal behaviour;
- ≈ engage in negotiations with defence that may resolve the matter without the need to go to trial;
- ≈ drafting an advice on evidence;
- ≈ ensuring that all matters that are necessary for the proper conduct of the file have been attended to by the investigating officer and if required giving directions to the police to follow up items of evidence;
- ≈ attending in the District and Supreme Courts on arraignments, bail applications and directions hearings;
- ≈ complying with the Declaration of Victim's Rights (Appendix B) and ensuring that appropriate witnesses are referred to the Witness Assistance Service;
- ≈ deliver properly prepared briefs to the prosecutor.

A significant number of trials are resolved without the need to go to trial and it is critical that these matters be identified as early as possible. A number of matters are resolved by the Committal Unit and committed for sentence to the superior courts. These matters then become the responsibility of the Solicitor Section. In addition to these matters there are many matters that will resolve by way of plea upon an accused being given appropriate advice by his/her lawyer. There are also some prosecutions that are assessed as not being in the public interest or having no reasonable prospect of conviction. A nolle prosequi is then entered in these matters as it would be inappropriate to continue the prosecution (Appendix C).

The carriage of the files through the courts requires that the solicitor attend on all interlocutory matters such as bail hearings, arguments on the law prior to trial, filing of prosecution applications for trial such as vulnerable witness applications and setting of matters for trial. A significant number of matters are the subject of applications by the defence pursuant to s269 of the Criminal Law Consolidation Act for a finding that they were mentally incompetent at the time of the offence or are unfit to stand trial. The calling of medical evidence and a finding of fact by a judge or jury resolves most of these matters. The Solicitor Section attends on a number of these matters without the need for them to be briefed to the Prosecutor Section.

In the past year there have been a number of changes both to personnel and the structure of the Solicitor Section. The Solicitor Section in May 2001 upon the return of the Committal Unit from Wright Street was restructured into two teams, both headed by a Senior Solicitor. The Committal Unit solicitors will provide the file load to the solicitors in each of the sections and the solicitors will then have conduct of the file from that point on. The ODPP has still retained the committal services, but it is now structured so that there is better supervision and training for all solicitors with the section.

Fraud Unit

The demand for advice and assistance with large and complex fraud investigations and prosecutions has remained, if not increased, and the DPP has maintained a dedicated fraud unit within the office with respect to these matters. The work of the unit encompasses all large and complex fraud matters investigated by the Serious Fraud Investigation Branch, Anti-Corruption Branch and Local Service Areas and extends from multi-million dollar "white collar" crime to matters involving, perjury, anti-corruption investigations of government agencies and allegations against legal practitioners. The last year has seen a substantial increase in the amount of credit card frauds and computer-related crime.

Early liaison between the Serious Fraud Investigation Branch and Anti-Corruption Branch has continued, resulting in substantial resource saving to the South Australian Police Department, this office and the Courts Administration Authority by ensuring early assessment as to whether a prosecution should be commenced and early resolution of matters wherever possible, thus ensuring the efficient distribution of investigative and prosecutorial resources.

In addition, the special arrangements for liaison between the Legal Practitioners Conduct Board and this Office continue with procedures formalised for notification by the Board to the Director of Public Prosecutions of matters which may involve criminal conduct.

In the last year, many serious cases of criminal fraudulent conduct involving, individually, hundreds of thousands of dollars, have been handled by the fraud unit. The sentencing standards for large scale systematic breach of trust frauds as established by the Court of Criminal Appeal in R v Davies and R v Cavanagh have been maintained. A recent example is the matter of R v Hignett, a fraud involving 70 counts of fraudulent conversion by a person in a position of trust totaling in $893,000. The accused was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment with a 6 year non-parole period.

Confiscations of Profits Section

The Office maintains within the Solicitor Section a dedicated Confiscations of Profits Section. There has been a significant increase in work undertaken by the Section in comparison to the previous financial year.

Restraining orders were granted against 79 defendants this year. This represents an increase of 126% on those granted in the previous financial year. Of these, 65 (82%) related to defendants charged with a serious drug offence. Restraining orders granted in relation to defendants charged with a serious drug offence, automatically convert into a forfeiture order six months after conviction (or appeal), unless the defendant can show that the property comes within the specific exceptions outlined in the Criminal Assets Confiscation Act 1996.

Forfeiture orders were granted against 52 defendants. This represents an increase of 27% on the previous year. Of the forfeiture orders made, 21 (40%) related to automatic forfeiture and 25 orders granted (48%) related to oral forfeitures made before the Court in which the defendant was tried for the criminal offences. Only two of the 25 oral forfeiture orders granted had restraining orders in place at the time that forfeiture took place.

Assistance through the provisions of the Act was made to one victim this year. This resulted in restitution of $13,600 being returned.

Revenue deposited into the Criminal Injuries Compensation Fund increased again this year. The total revenue deposited into the Fund amounted to $758,078.67. This represents an increase of 40.7% on the previous financial year. The average value of each individual order has once again increased this year.

Seven applications for legal expenses were granted this financial year.

One matter was heard on appeal in this financial year, Hepworth v DPP. It was found that s15(5)(d) is constitutionally valid and the application did not fall within the exceptions in s15(5)(d). The appeal was subsequently dismissed.

Policy and Legal Training Unit

The Policy and Training Unit was comprised of two senior solicitors (working in a job share) for most of the year.

The Unit has undertaken the following policy functions within the Solicitor Section:

- ≈ providing advice to the Director in relation to the impact of proposed new legislation and/or amendments to existing legislation;
- ≈ providing advice to the Director in relation to initiating changes to existing legislation and/or policies;
- ≈ liaising with the Policy and Legislation Section of the Attorney-General's Department in order to achieve the most workable solution to sometimes quite difficult problems associated with legislative change;
- ≈ ensuring that all professional staff are informed on a regular basis of any legislative or policy changes that impact on the Office;
- ≈ providing advice to SA Police in relation to developing policies and procedures that adequately reflect their obligations and those of the ODPP;
- ≈ providing advice to SA Police in relation to training manuals used by the Police Academy;
- ≈ providing advice to a number of agencies on the criminal law trial process as it relates to their publications.

The Unit has undertaken the following training functions:

- ≈ developing and organising, in consultation with all professional staff and management, the continuing legal education program for the Office;
- ≈ disseminating information to professional staff in relation to recent CCA and High Court cases;
- ≈ developing and writing Crime Training Seminars on a range of topics for delivery to SA Police at the various Local Service Areas on a regular basis.

Counsel Services

The Prosecution Section during the last financial year has continued to function on significantly reduced numbers. This has primarily been due to the prosecution of the Bodies in the Barrels case. However, this situation has been exacerbated by the continuation of a trend which has been emerging for the last several years, namely tendency of a significant number of trials to take much longer than anticipated and to be significantly more complex than in past years.

The matter of R v Gillard and Preston featured in last year's annual report finally concluded on 28 August 2000. The Full Court handed down its judgement on 21 December 2000 dismissing both appeals. The appellants have now sought leave to appeal in the High Court.

Another significant prosecution in this financial year was the matter of the R v Karger which occupied approximately seven months of court time including a three month voir dire hearing on the admissibility of DNA results achieved using the latest technology available to the Forensic Science Centre (Profiler Plus). During the course of the lengthy voir dire hearing the methodology and practices of the Forensic Science Centre were very much under the microscope. Expert witnesses from the United States, Australia and New Zealand were called. The court upheld the admissibility of the evidence obtained using Profiler Plus and the work conducted by the South Australian Forensic Science Centre.

The Bodies in the Barrels prosecution is now approaching its final stage of preparation with the Committal which lasted eight months finally being completed in June 2001. Whilst the committal proceedings began in December 2000 this involved approximately 45 sitting days. The three accused in June 2001 were each committed to stand trial for ten counts of murder. The prosecution of Bunting, Wagner and Haydon (bodies in the barrels prosecution) is being prepared for the trial. At the date of printing this report the trial date remains to be fixed.

The trial of R v Liddy (a former Magistrate employed in the South Australian Judiciary) was completed in the second half of this financial year with the conviction of Mr Liddy on 10 of the 15 charges. Nine of the convictions related to offences of child sexual abuse involving four victims and one conviction related to the offence of offering a benefit to a witness. These offences were committed whilst he was a serving Magistrate. Consequently the trial attained a degree of notoriety.

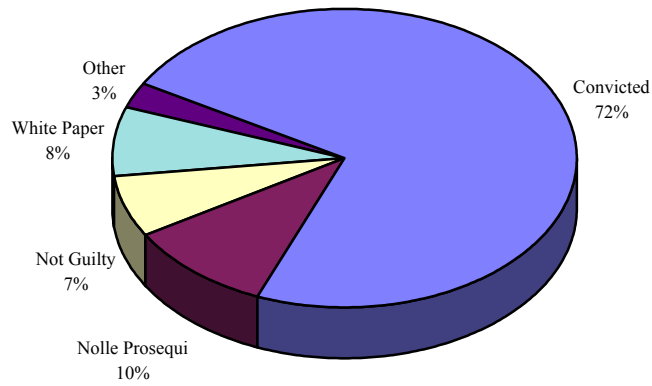

The full impact of the amendments to the Criminal Law Consolidation Act 1935 relating to home invasions was felt during the current year. The statistics reflect the increase in both a number of files coming into the Office and trials prosecuted for offences of Aggravated Serious Criminal Trespass. A number of these cases were finalised during the current financial year and there have been several judgements from Supreme Court. These have set a benchmark for sentencing for these types of offences. The case of Cvitko and the case of Elliott (which went to the Court of Criminal Appeal) where sentences of between 15 and 20 years were imposed, have in particular, set the benchmark for crimes of Aggravated Criminal Trespass which fall into the most serious category.

Appeals

The Office appears in all appellate jurisdictions.

HIGH COURT

There were 14 applications for special leave to appeal heard by the High Court during the last year. Those applications were heard when the High Court was in Adelaide in August 2000 and by video link to Canberra in February 2001. No applicants were granted leave to appeal to the High Court and all matters were refused.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL

Over the last year the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions has been involved in a number of significant appeals and questions of law.

The type of issues considered by the Court of Appeal and the Full Court have included:

R v Lobban (cannabis) - a consideration of section 32(1) of the Controlled Substances Act 1984 (admissibility of evidence identifying material as cannabis pursuant to the exercise of a general unfairness discretion where that evidence had been unlawfully destroyed).

R v Mason (amphetamine) - a consideration of section 32(1)(e) of the Controlled Substances Act 1984 (mental element - whether section 32(3) requires that the accused has knowledge of the quantity of a drug or whether it is simply necessary to know the substance possessed is a drug of dependence; whether the word "knowingly" in section 32(3) adds an additional element of knowledge above the requirement of knowledge in section 32(1) - analysis of conflicting authorities and the effect of the decision in He Kau Teh v R).

R v St Clair (sentence) - observations as to sentencing standards for the offence of burglary.

R v Esposito (sentence) - observations as to the weight to be accorded to the age of a prisoner, life expectancy and the likelihood of death in custody.

Question of Law Reserved (No. 1 of 2000) (confidential communications) a consideration of the law of discovery and inspection of documents where those documents relate to communications made by victim in a therapeutic context.

R v WS (Vulnerable Witness Provisions) - a consideration of section 13(1) of the Evidence Act 1929 (factors to be taken into account when determining an application by a vulnerable witness for use of closed circuit television when giving evidence).

R v Nixon (Witness Protection) - a consideration of the Witness Protection Act 1996 - whether the powers contained therein are incompatible with the integrity, independence and/or impartiality of the Supreme Court.

R v Martin (Criminal Procedure) - a consideration of the circumstances in which the Trial Judge may properly rely upon undisclosed observations as to the appearance or conduct of parties and witnesses made during the course of trial.

In relation to appeals relating to the admissibility of evidence and the judge's directions to the jury in criminal trials, the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions ensures that the Court of Appeal deals with each matter by reference to established rules of evidence and criminal procedure.

In relation to sentencing appeals, the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions provides submissions on the appropriate approach that should be adopted in sentencing procedures, and occasionally institutes appeal proceedings where it appears that a court has made a substantial and manifest error in the sentencing of an offender.

The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions is also responsible for stating particular questions of law to the Court of Appeal which may arise at any stage of the trial process and which are of general relevance and significance to the practice of criminal law in this State.

MAGISTRATES' APPEALS

This year the Office has continued to conduct Magistrates Appeals instituted by defendants in relation to minor indictable offences such as break enter and larceny, assault occasioning actual bodily harm and indecent assault offences. In the main these were appeals instituted against the imposition of sentences although there have been a number that related to convictions following trial. The Office has maintained its policy in providing advice and opinions to Police Prosecution Services regarding the institution of prosecution appeals.

Witness Assistance Service

The Witness Assistance Service commenced service delivery to vulnerable witnesses, victims of crime and their immediate family members in October 1995. The Witness Assistance Service continues to provide a commitment to ensuring a quality professional service to vulnerable witnesses, victims of crime and their immediate family members. The service has also continued its commitment to community education, research and collaboration with other agencies through public speaking, training, information provision and representation on a range of committees and projects.

The Witness Assistance Service has continued to receive the professional support of the management team and a cooperative working relationship with legal and administrative staff within the ODPP, contributing to overall effective and efficient service delivery. The professional skills and services of external agencies continues to strengthen to develop positive outcomes for clients, organisations and the community.

MISSION

To ensure that all victims of crime and their immediate family members have access to information and support services, and are aware of their rights and responsibilities when dealing with the criminal justice system.

OBJECTIVES

The following objectives provide a framework in order to achieve the mission of the Witness Assistance Service:

- ≈ ensure victims and their immediate family members are aware of their rights and entitlements, and also their responsibilities;
- ≈ provide victims, their families and witnesses with information about the prosecution processes and ensure they are kept informed about the matter;
- ≈ design and contribute to information packages for victims and their families;
- ≈ inform victims and witnesses about vulnerable witness provisions;
- ≈ assist witnesses prepare for court by providing court tours and information about giving evidence;
- ≈ provide information and assistance on victim impact statements;
- ≈ ensure victims and witnesses who contact the Office to seek information about a matter are dealt with promptly in accordance with the Declaration of Victim’s Rights;
- ≈ assess victims needs in dealing with the prosecution process and provide referrals to appropriate organisations for ongoing counselling;
- ≈ work with solicitors and prosecutors as part of a team, in a manner that ensures best outcomes for the victim/witness;
- ≈ identify ways of improving services to victims and witnesses - participate in and initiate research and conduct customer surveys;
- ≈ help to establish systems of communication that enhance service delivery from the Office;
- ≈ network with interested stakeholders dealing with victims and witnesses;
- ≈ establish and maintain statistical information;

- ≈ liaise nationally with other Witness Assistance Services to ensure consistency across Australia;
- ≈ advocate for resources to improve delivery of services to victims and witnesses in South Australia;
- ≈ attend conferences and when possible conduct conferences with professionals in order to maximise professional development; and
- ≈ participate in internal and external committee work as required.

SERVICE DELIVERY

As expected referrals to the Witness Assistance Service have gradually increased each year. This is reflected in the increasing number of matters the Witness Assistance Service have been involved in, the injection of further staff resources adding to the Service's ability to respond to the increasing demand both from within the ODPP and externally via police or other agencies working with victims of crime. It is anticipated that the introduction of the Victims of Crime

Bill, will further increase the obligation to service delivery, of the Witness Assistance Service within the ODPP.

STAFFING

The appointment of another permanent position within the Witness Assistance Service adds to the commitment of the Office towards services to victims, their families and witnesses.

CONFERENCES

The Witness Assistance Service attended the 4th National DPP - Witness Assistance Network Meeting in Canberra. This conference success, affirmed the commitment nationally to these network meetings, in order to ensure consistency and communication across Australia in delivery of services to victims of crime and witnesses in Supreme and District Court matters. In 2002 the Witness Assistance Service will host the 5th National Witness Assistance Network Meeting in Adelaide.

CIRCUIT

In maintaining its commitment to delivery of services in the country regions, Witness Assistance Service continues to attend country areas to assist victims of crime and their families. Country areas include Mount Gambier, Port Augusta, Port Pirie, Murray Bridge, Ceduna and Whyalla.

Support Services

The support staff have continued to meet the challenge of the Office to provide an effective support service. There are 23 support staff who provide services to the Office, these include law clerks, executive assistant, secretaries, receptionists and rounds clerks. There has however been a requirement for part of the year to have temporary agency staff.

There have been additional pressures placed on the support team this year by the long term release of two staff to the Bodies in the Barrel prosecution team.

The refurbishment of the Office during February 2001 has also now necessitated that the support staff are located on three levels. A full time secretarial assistance has now been placed on Level 8.

Training and Development

Staff Performance Management

The Office has continued its performance management system for staff during the year. This system continues to assist management in identifying training and development requirements for staff. As part of its commitment to the training and development of staff one day team building workshops were held for all staff during August.

In addition to conferences and Continuing Legal Education (CLE) sessions during the year staff also attended 19 training courses and 4 seminars.

Continuing Legal Education (CLE) Program

The Office now has prosecutors and solicitors of varying experience and the continuing legal education program has tried to focus on a broad range of topics to cater for the needs of all staff. The Policy and Training Unit staff in consultation with the CLE Committee are responsible for deciding on the topics and the speakers. The program this year has continued to utilise the combined experience of senior practitioners within the Office and the judiciary as well as several very experienced medical and scientific professionals.

The Program this year has included:

Hon Justice Martin - (Supreme Court) on role of the Director of Public Prosecutions

Judge Vanstone - (District Court) on cross examination

Mr Alan Moss - (Chief Magistrate) on diversionary schemes in the Magistrates Court

Dr Jane Taylor - on Forensic Odontology

Dr Kenneth O'Brien - (Forensic Mental Health Services) on the definition of mental impairment and mental fitness to stand trial and the presentation of psychiatric evidence in court and issues with the current legislative regime

Ms Lyndall Young - (Yarrow Place) on evaluating medical evidence of adult sexual assault victims

Dr Chris Pearman - (Forensic Science Centre) on DNA

We would like to thank the Commissioner for Equal Opportunity for the continued use of their board room, which has allowed the Office to accommodate large numbers of people for these sessions.

Conferences

Staff attended (and in some instances presented papers) at the following conferences and forums:

- ❖ Australian Association of Crown Prosecutors Conference
- ❖ National Forum of Director of Public Prosecutions Executive
- ❖ National Criminal Courts Statistics Unit Meeting
- ❖ National Child Sexual Assault Reform Committee
- ❖ Australian Directors of Public Prosecution
- ❖ International Association of Prosecutors
- ❖ Heads of Prosecuting Agencies Conference
- ❖ 4th National DPP Witness Assistance Network

INTER-AGENCY RELATIONSHIPS

Government and the Attorney-General

The relationship between an Attorney-General as first law officer and a Director of Public Prosecutions varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. In South Australia the Director is entirely independent of direction or control by the Crown, or any Minister or officer of the Crown other than the Attorney-General.

The Attorney-General may, after consultation with the Director, give directions and furnish guidelines to the Director in relation to the carrying out of his functions. Any such directions or guidelines must be published as soon as practicable in the Government Gazette, and tabled before each House of Parliament. The requirement to report to Parliament ensures that there is a political accountability for any prosecution action, which an Attorney-General might take.

In practice, the Attorney-General leaves the exercise of power to the independent discretion of the Director. This accords with the convention established for relationships between the two law officers. This role also conforms to the intent of the Director of Public Prosecutions Act, 1991. The Director is able to raise any concerns he has directly with Parliament pursuant to Section 12 of the Act.

While the Act provides for a formal method of consultation between the Attorney-General and the Director, there has been no need to resort to the formal mechanisms of the Act. The relationship between the Attorney-General and the Director was harmonious and productive during the course of the year.

Justice Department

The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions is formally a part of the Attorney-General's Department. For administrative purposes, the Director reports to the Chief Executive of the Justice Portfolio. In day-to-day practical terms, this is more of a liaison rather than a strict reporting relationship. The Office budget has been isolated from that of the Department generally, even though it is still formally included within the Department's expenditure, and the Department remains responsible for preparing accounts for audit purposes. Financial Reporting as required by the Public Sector Management Act 1995 and the Public Finance and Audit Act 1987 is contained in the Attorney-General's Department Annual Report.

As an associated office of the Attorney-General's Department the Office draws on a range of corporate services provided by the Department. The services provided during the past year have included:

- ~ executive support
- ~ financial services
- ~ human resources, including staff training
- ~ information technology
- ~ library and record services

The Office has only a small internal administrative component and therefore relies heavily on the advice and support from the Justice Portfolio Services Division.

The Office takes this opportunity to acknowledge the Department's role, and in particular its Chief Executive Ms Kate Lennon, and to extend our thanks for the support both she and her staff have provided.

SA Police

The relationship between this Office and the South Australian Police Department continues to work well with a strong emphasis on consultation between both parties to ensure consistent and accurate information is provided to the public.

This relationship has been strengthened by the formation of the Police Liaison Committee in accordance with recommendation 64 of the Costello Report. This Committee which has been in existence for approximately 18 months, meets every three months with the representation on the Committee from both offices being at the most senior level.

This year there was another seminar at Fort Largs Academy in May 2001. On that occasion both the Director and the Associate Director spoke to the police and answered questions on many topical issues, including forensic procedures, disclosure, records of interview, file preparation.

Further, close liaison between members of the Committal Unit and Police Prosecution Branch continues. This has enabled the police to concentrate on the investigation of criminal activity and the advice provided by the Committal Unit ensures that following the investigation the correct charges are laid and that matters which have no reasonable prospect of conviction do not proceed.

This Office has the responsibility for the prosecution of police officers charged with criminal offences and continues to liaise with the Internal Investigation Branch providing advice and an independent prosecution service.

Courts Administration Authority

The Office and the Courts Administration Authority continue to work closely in the day-to-day running of the criminal courts. There is daily contact with respect to setting matters down for trial, sentencing, remands, pre-trial conferences and bail reviews. We thank the Court staff for their continued co-operation.

National Crime Authority

The Office continues to maintain a good working relationship with the National Crime Authority.

Sexual Assault Section - SA Police

The Sexual Assault Section has continued to provide valuable assistance and expertise to the work of the Committal Unit and the Witness Assistance Service during the past financial year. The commitment of the staff of the Sexual Assault Service to providing quality services to victims of sexual assault and to maintaining a positive working relationship with the Office is highly regarded by this Office.

Victims of Crime Branch - SAPOL

During 2000-2001 the Victims of Crime Branch has continued to provide support and information to victims of crime and their family members. The Witness Assistance Service and other ODPP representatives have participated in several training programs for SA Police Victim Contact Officers. The maintenance of a close working relationship between the ODPP and Victim Contact Officers has enhanced the provision of services to victims of crime. The work of the Branch is greatly appreciated by this Office.

Yarrow Place - Rape and Sexual Assault Service

Yarrow Place staff have continued to work in close association with the Witness Assistance Service during the past financial year. The organisation has further developed its range of services to victims of rape and sexual assault and provides a valuable referral resource for clients of the Witness Assistance Service. Legal and social work staff from the Office have participated in training programs developed for Yarrow Place staff during 2000-2001 and joint consultation between the two organisations in regard to service delivery and broader issues has occurred on a regular basis. The Office appreciates the expertise and professionalism consistently provided by Yarrow Place staff to victims of rape and sexual assault.

Victim Support Service

Victim Support Service has maintained its commitment to the provision of support services to victims of crime and their family members during 2000-2001. The Witness Assistance Service has provided training for Victim Support Service Court Companion Training Seminars and has continued to work closely with the service to ensure that victims of crime have access to appropriate counselling services and support. The professional services provided by this organisation and the dedication of the Victim Support Service staff are valued by the Office.

STATUTORY REPORTING

Consultants

The reporting on the use of consultants by the Office during 2000-01 is contained within the Annual Report of the Attorney-General's Department.

Directions to Commissioner of Police and from Attorney-General

Pursuant to Section 9 of the Director of Public Prosecutions Act 1991 there were no directions or guidelines given by the Attorney-General to the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Pursuant to Section 11 of the Director of Public Prosecutions Act 1991 there were no directions or guidelines given to the Commissioner of Police by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Executive Employment and Human Resource Reporting

All relevant matters in relation to Executive Employment and Human Resource Reporting are contained within the Annual Report of the Attorney-General's Department.

Financial Reporting

All relevant matters in relation to financial performance are contained within the Annual Report of the Attorney-General's Department.

Freedom of Information

The Office is an "exempt agency" for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 1991.

Occupational Health, Safety & Welfare

There continues to be a preventative approach to occupational health, safety and welfare within the Office and regular hazard identification audits are carried out by both the OH&S representative and management.

The Office has continued to maintain the highest level of health and safety, in all areas of prevention, claims and rehabilitation in accordance with WorkCover standards.

The Office would like to thank Ms Mandy Neller who has been the OH&S Rep for the last three years for her dedication to the role. Mandy's term of office expires in August.

Overseas Travel

The Director attended the following overseas conferences during the year.

- ❖ International Association of Prosecutors, 5th Annual Conference and General Meeting - Capetown, South Africa
- ❖ Head of Prosecuting Agencies Conference - Edinburgh, Scotland

DECLARATION OF VICTIM'S RIGHTS

In all dealings with victims of crime the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions, is required to give effect to the Declaration of Victim's Rights set out below in so far as they are applicable to the functions of the Office.

The victim of crime shall have the right to:

- 1 be dealt with at all times in a sympathetic, constructive and reassuring manner and with due regard to the victim's personal situation, rights and dignity;
- 2 be informed about the progress of investigations being conducted by police (except where such disclosure might jeopardise the investigations);
- 3 be advised of the charges laid against the accused and of any modifications to the charges in question;
- 4 have a comprehensive statement taken at the time of the initial investigation which shall include information regarding the harm done and losses incurred in consequence of the commission of the offence. The information in this statement shall be updated before the accused is sentenced;
- 5 be advised of justifications for accepting a plea of guilty to a lesser charge or for accepting a guilty plea in return for recommended leniency in sentencing;
- 6 be advised of justification for entering a nolle prosequi (ie to withdraw charges) when the decision is taken not to proceed with charges. (Decisions which might prove discomfoting to victims should be explained with sensitivity and tact);
- 7 have property held by the Crown for purposes of investigation or evidence returned as promptly as possible. Inconveniences to victims should be minimised wherever possible;
- 8 be informed about the trial process and of the rights and responsibilities of witnesses;
- 9 be protected from unnecessary contact with the accused and defence witnesses during the course of the trial;
- 10 not have his or her residential address disclosed unless deemed material to the defence or prosecution;
- 11 not be required to appear at preliminary hearings or committal proceedings unless deemed material to the defence or prosecution;

- 13 be advised of the outcome of all bail applications and be informed of any conditions of bail which are designed to protect the victim from the accused;
- 14 have the full effects of the crime upon him or her made known to the sentencing court either by the prosecutor or by information contained in a pre-sentence report; including any financial, social, psychological and physical harm done to or suffered by the victim. Any other information that may aid the court in sentencing including the restitution and compensation needs of the victim should also be put before the court by the prosecutor;
- 15 be advised of the outcome of criminal proceedings and be fully apprised of the sentence, when imposed, and its implications;
- 16 be advised of the outcome of parole proceedings;
- 17 be notified of an offender's impending release from custody.

PROSECUTION POLICY

INTRODUCTION

The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions was established in 1992 to provide an effective, fair and independent criminal prosecution service for the people of South Australia. Since that time all major criminal prosecutions have been conducted by the Office in Adelaide and in the country areas of Port Augusta and Mount Gambier.

The Office is committed to the highest ethical and professional standards and strives to achieve the most effective and appropriate criminal prosecutions. It is integral to the process that all members of the Office adopt and implement the same set of values and standards when evaluating charges and conducting prosecutions.

The Prosecution Policy was first issued upon the establishment of the Office in 1992 and since that time has been under review. I have provided further guidance to my staff in the form of guidelines for their important decision making processes and to maintain the highest ethical standards.

The policy and guidelines are available to all interested members of the public, legal profession and the police.

P J L Rofe QC

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS

INTRODUCTION

This Policy and the annexed guidelines are those governing the decision to prosecute criminal offences in South Australia. They form part of the uniform prosecution policy adopted by the Directors of Public Prosecutions of all States and the Commonwealth of Australia in 1990.

THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS

The Office is divided into a number of smaller units that conduct the functions of solicitors and prosecutors with a close working relationship. In this document the legal staff within the Office and members of the private profession briefed to appear on behalf on the Director are referred to as prosecutors.

The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions' first contact with most criminal matters is through the Committal Unit where the major indictable offences in the State are referred by the Police either prior to or just after charging. The Office then assumes conduct of these matters until their final resolution. The Office also conducts Summary Trials in complex or sensitive matters and appeals from the Magistrates Court on indictable offences. This document provides a framework for those conducting prosecutions on behalf of the State.

In addition to the legal staff the Office has a Witness Assistance Service (WAS) that provides assistance to witnesses involved in major indictable proceedings and referral to other agencies if necessary.

All staff within the Office work on the instructions of the Director who has been appointed pursuant to the Director of Public Prosecutions Act 1991 (the Act).

THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS

The obligations of the Director of Public Prosecutions are no different from those imposed on every prosecutor or prosecuting authority in the common law system.

The primary obligation on a prosecutor is one of fairness. Fairness must dictate eventually the discharge of all of a prosecutor's functions. But the question must be asked as to whom these obligations are owed. Obviously a prosecutor must be fair to an accused but that cannot be the sole consideration. There are other parties with legitimate interests who are also entitled to expect a prosecutor to act in a particular way. Sometimes these interests will conflict with those of the accused.

A prosecutor has obligations to varying degrees to the following:

- ♦ the court (judge and jury)
- ♦ the community
- ♦ the accused
- ♦ victims
- ♦ witnesses
- ♦ defence counsel

A prosecutor must play his or her part in securing a fair trial for persons accused of criminal offences. A fair trial is one that results in justice being done, ie conviction of the guilty as well as acquittal of the innocent. A fair trial may be described also as one where all relevant credible evidence is presented, tested and adjudicated upon according to law. The obligations of the prosecution to the various parties flow from those concepts.

THE ROLE OF THE PROSECUTOR

In order to understand the obligations of a prosecutor in any given situation or at any particular stage of the trial process, it is necessary to define the role of the prosecutor. The exercise has been attempted on numerous occasions by various commentators. The role is usually expressed in terms such as “a minister of justice” or “an officer of the court”. It may be more easily understood in terms of what it is not. It is not about winning or losing where convictions are wins and acquittals are losses. A conviction obtained on insufficient or doubtful evidence should be regarded as a loss just as much as a failure to obtain a conviction on a strong credible prosecution case. Again it is a matter of striking a balance.

Some quotations from commentators may assist in defining the role of the prosecutor :

“It cannot be over emphasised that the purpose [cf expectation] of a criminal prosecution is not to obtain a conviction: it is to lay before a jury what the Crown considers to be credible evidence relevant to what is alleged to be a crime. Counsel have a duty to see that all available legal proof of the facts is presented; it should be done firmly and pressed to its legitimate strength, but it must also be done fairly. The role of prosecutor excludes any notion of winning or losing: his function is a matter of public duty than which in civil life there can be none charged with greater personal responsibility. It is to be efficiently performed with an ingrained sense of the dignity, the seriousness and the justness of judicial proceedings.” (per Rand J in Boucher v R (1954) 110 CCC 263 at 270).

“Finally there is or has been a tendency for Counsel for the prosecution not to prosecute firmly enough. The last half century has seen a welcome transition in the role of a prosecuting counsel from a persecuting advocate into a minister of justice, but in some places the pendulum has swung so far and the ministry has moved so close to the opposition that the prosecution’s case is not adequately presented and Counsel, frightened of being accused of excessive fervor tend to do little except talk of reasonable doubt and leave the final speech on the facts to the Judge. The result of the deficiency is that the duty of seeing that the prosecution’s case is effectively put to the jury is sometimes transferred to the Judge and thus the balance of the trial is upset.” (Lord Devlin, Trial by Jury pp.122-123)

But in the end it may come back to the words of Christmas Humphreys QC:

“It is the duty of prosecuting counsel to prosecute, and he need not rise to his feet and apologise for so doing. It is not unfair to prosecute” (1955 Crim LR 739 at 741) and again -

“Always the principle holds that Crown counsel is concerned with justice first, justice second and conviction a very bad third” (Ibid p.746)

The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions in South Australia is committed to those ideals.

THE DECISION TO PROSECUTE

A prosecution should not proceed if there is no reasonable prospect of a conviction being secured. This basic criterion is the cornerstone of the uniform prosecution policy adopted in Australia.

The decision whether or not to prosecute is the most important step in the prosecution process. In every case great care must be taken in the interests of the victim, the suspected offender and the community at large to ensure that the right decision is made. A wrong decision to prosecute or, conversely, a wrong decision not to prosecute, tends to undermine the confidence of the community in the criminal justice system.

It has never been the rule in this country that suspected criminal offences must automatically be the subject of prosecution. A significant consideration is whether the prosecution is in the public interest. The resources available for prosecution action are finite and should not be wasted pursuing inappropriate cases, a corollary of which is that the available resources are employed to pursue those cases worthy of prosecution.

The initial consideration in the exercise of this discretion is whether the evidence is sufficient to justify the institution or continuation of a prosecution. A prosecution should not be instituted or continued unless there is admissible, substantial and reliable evidence that a criminal offence known to the law has been committed by the accused. There is a continuing obligation to assess the evidence as the matter proceeds.

The decision whether there is a reasonable prospect of conviction requires an evaluation of how strong the case is likely to be when presented in court. It must take into account such matters as the availability, competence and credibility of witnesses and their likely impression on the arbiter of fact, and the admissibility of any alleged confession or other evidence. The prosecutor should also have regard to any lines of defence which are plainly open to, or have been indicated by, the accused and any other factors which in the view of the prosecutor could affect the likelihood or otherwise of a conviction. This assessment may be a difficult one to make, and of course there can never be an assurance that a prosecution will succeed. Indeed it is inevitable that some will fail. However, application of this test dispassionately, after due deliberation by a person experienced in weighing the available evidence, is the best way of seeking to avoid the risk of prosecuting an innocent person and pursuing a futile prosecution resulting in the unnecessary expenditure of public funds.

When evaluating the evidence regard should be had to the following matters:

- (a) Are there grounds for believing the evidence may be excluded bearing in mind the principles of admissibility at common law and under statute?
- (b) If the case depends in part on admissions by the accused, are there any grounds for believing that they are of doubtful reliability having regard to the age, intelligence and apparent understanding of the accused?
- (c) Does it appear that a witness is exaggerating, or that his or her memory is faulty, or that the witness is either hostile or friendly to the accused, or may be otherwise unreliable?
- (d) Has a witness a motive for telling less than the whole truth?
- (e) Are there matters which might properly be put to a witness by the defence to attack his or her credibility?
- (f) What sort of impression is the witness likely to make? How is the witness likely to stand up to cross-examination?
- (g) If identity is likely to be an issue, how cogent and reliable is the evidence of those who purport to identify the accused?
- (h) If there is conflict between eye witnesses, does it go beyond what one would expect and hence materially weaken the case?
- (i) Is there anything which causes suspicion that a false story may have been concocted?
- (j) Are all the necessary witnesses available and competent to give evidence, including any who may be out of the jurisdiction? Is any witness likely to obtain an exemption from giving evidence pursuant to Section 21 of the Evidence Act, 1929?

- (k) Where child witnesses are involved, are there statutory difficulties in the reception and evaluation of their evidence?

This list is not exhaustive, and of course the matters to be considered will depend upon the circumstances of each individual case.

Having satisfied himself or herself that the evidence is sufficient to justify the institution or continuation of a prosecution, the prosecutor must then consider whether, in the light of the provable facts and the whole of the surrounding circumstances, the public interest requires a prosecution to be pursued. It is not the rule that all offences brought to the attention of the authorities must be prosecuted.

The factors which can properly be taken into account in deciding whether the public interest requires a prosecution will vary from case to case. While some public interest factors may militate against a decision to proceed with a prosecution, there are public interest factors which operate in favour of proceeding with a prosecution, for example the seriousness of the offence and the need for deterrence. In this regard, generally speaking the more serious the offence the less likely it will be that the public interest will not require that a prosecution be pursued.

Factors which may arise for consideration in determining whether the public interest requires a prosecution include:

- (a) the seriousness or, conversely, the triviality of the alleged offence or that it is of a "technical" nature only;
- (b) any mitigating or aggravating circumstances;
- (c) the youth, age, intelligence, physical health, mental health, or special infirmity of the accused, a witness or victim;
- (d) the accused's antecedents and background;
- (e) the staleness of the alleged offence;
- (f) the degree of culpability of the accused in connection with the offence;
- (g) the effect on public order and morale;
- (h) the obsolescence or obscurity of the law;
- (i) whether the prosecution would be perceived as counter-productive, for example, by bringing the law into disrepute;
- (j) the availability and efficacy of any alternatives to prosecution;
- (k) the prevalence of the alleged offence and the need for deterrence, both personal and general;
- (l) whether the consequences of any resulting prosecution or conviction would be unduly harsh and oppressive;
- (m) whether the alleged offence is of considerable public concern;
- (n) any entitlement of the State or other person or body to criminal compensation, reparation or forfeiture;
- (o) the attitude of the victim of the alleged offence to a prosecution;
- (p) the likely length and expense of a trial;

- (q) whether the accused is willing to co-operate in the investigation or prosecution of others, or the extent to which the accused has done so;
- (r) the likely outcome in the event of a finding of guilt having regard to the sentencing options available to the court;
- (s) whether the alleged offence is triable only on indictment; and
- (t) the necessity to maintain public confidence in such institutions as the Parliament and the Courts.

The weight to be given to these and other factors will depend on the particular circumstances of each case.

As a matter of practical reality the proper decision in most cases will be to proceed with a prosecution if there is sufficient evidence available to justify a prosecution. Although there may be mitigating factors present in a particular case, often the proper decision will be to proceed with a prosecution and for those factors to be put to the sentencing court in mitigation. Nevertheless, where the alleged offence is not so serious as plainly to require prosecution the prosecutor should always apply his or her mind to whether the public interest requires a prosecution to be pursued.

A decision whether or not to prosecute must clearly not be influenced by:

- (a) the race, religion, sex, national origin or political associations, activities or beliefs of the accused or any other person involved;
- (b) personal feelings concerning the accused or the victim;
- (c) possible political advantage or disadvantage to the Government or any political group or party; or
- (d) the possible effect of the decision on the personal or professional circumstances of those responsible for the prosecution decision.

Special considerations apply to the prosecution of young offenders. Prosecution of a young offender should always be regarded as a severe step, and generally speaking a much stronger case can be made for methods of disposal which fall short of prosecution unless the seriousness of the alleged offence or the circumstances of the young offender concerned dictate otherwise. In this regard, ordinarily the public interest will not require the prosecution of a young offender who is a first offender in circumstances where the alleged offence is not serious.

In deciding whether or not the public interest warrants the prosecution of a young offender regard should be had to such of the factors that apply to adults as appear to be relevant, but particularly to:

- (a) the seriousness of the alleged offence;
- (b) the age, apparent maturity and mental capacity of the young offender;
- (c) the available alternatives to prosecution, such as a caution, and their efficacy;
- (d) the sentencing options available to the relevant Youth Court if the matter were to be prosecuted;
- (e) The young offender's family circumstances, particularly whether the parents or guardians of the young offender appear able and prepared to exercise effective discipline and control over the young offender;
- (f) The young offender's antecedents, including the circumstances of any previous caution the young offender may have been given, and whether they are such as to indicate that a less formal disposal of the present matter would be inappropriate; and
- (g) whether a prosecution would be likely to be harmful to the young offender or be inappropriate, having regard to such matters as the personality of the young offender and his or her family circumstances.

Under no circumstances should a young offender be prosecuted solely to secure access to the welfare powers of the court.

Pursuant to Section 17 of the Young Offenders Act, 1993, all young offenders charged with homicide, or an offence consisting of an attempt to commit or assault with intent to commit homicide, are to be dealt with by an adult court. In other cases an application by the DPP or police prosecutor can be made to have a young offender dealt with as an adult if it is considered that it is warranted by the gravity of the offence or because the offence was part of a pattern of repeated offending.

Guideline No 1 - Choice of Charges

In many cases the evidence will disclose a number of possible offences. Care must therefore be taken to choose a charge or charges which adequately reflect the nature and extent of the criminal conduct disclosed by the evidence and which will provide the Court with an appropriate basis for sentence.

In the ordinary course the charge or charges laid or proceeded with will be the most serious disclosed by the evidence. Nevertheless, when account is taken of such matters as the strength of the available evidence, the probable lines of defence to a particular charge and other considerations including the appropriate sentence, it may be appropriate to lay or proceed with a charge which is not the most serious revealed by the evidence.

Under no circumstances should charges be laid with the intention of providing scope for subsequent charge-bargaining.

The High Court in R v Hoar [1981] 148 CLR 32 at 38 has highlighted the need for restraint in laying conspiracy charges:

“Generally speaking, it is undesirable that conspiracy should be charged when a substantive offence has been committed and there is a sufficient and effective charge that this offence has been committed.”

Whenever possible substantive charges should be laid. However, there are occasions when a conspiracy charge is the only one which is adequate and appropriate on the available evidence. Where it is proposed to lay or proceed with conspiracy charges against a number of accused jointly, those responsible for making the necessary decision must guard against the risk of the joint trial being unduly complex or lengthy.

It will never be appropriate to overcharge on an information to gain a benefit in relation to charge-bargaining or for some other perceived benefit to the prosecution. In cases where there have been numerous offences committed, the prosecutor should strive to charge counts, that sufficiently reflect the gravity of the incidents or the course of conduct.

Guideline No 2 - Charge-Bargaining

Charge-bargaining involves negotiations between the defence and the prosecution in relation to the charges to be proceeded with. Such negotiations may result in the accused pleading guilty to fewer than all of the charges he or she is facing, or to a lesser charge or charges, with the remaining charges either not being proceeded with or taken into account without proceeding to conviction.

These guidelines have earlier referred to the care that must be taken in choosing the charge or charges to be laid. Nevertheless, circumstances can change and new facts can come to light. Agreements as to charge or charges and plea must be consistent with the requirements of justice.

A proposal should not be entertained by the prosecution unless:

- (a) the charges to be proceeded with bear a reasonable relationship to the nature of the criminal conduct of the accused;
- (b) those charges provide an adequate basis for an appropriate sentence in all the circumstances of the case; and
- (c) there is evidence to support the charges.

Any decision whether or not to agree to a proposal advanced by the defence, or to put a counter-proposal to the defence, must take into account all the circumstances of the case and other relevant considerations including:

- (a) whether the accused is willing to co-operate in the investigation or prosecution of others, or the extent to which the accused has done so;
- (b) whether the sentence that is likely to be imposed if the charges are varied as proposed (taking into account such matters as whether the accused is already serving a term of imprisonment) would be appropriate for the criminal conduct involved;
- (c) the desirability of prompt and certain resolution of the case;
- (d) the accused's antecedents;
- (e) the strength of the prosecution case;
- (f) the likelihood of adverse consequences to witnesses;
- (g) in cases where there has been a financial loss to the State or any person, whether the accused has made restitution or arrangements for restitution;
- (h) the need to avoid delay in the resolution of other pending cases;
- (i) the time and expense involved in a trial and any appeal proceedings;
- (j) the views of the investigating police officers; and
- (k) the views of the victim or others significantly affected.

In no circumstances should the prosecution entertain a charge-bargaining proposal if the accused maintains his or her innocence with respect to a charge or charges to which the accused has offered to plead guilty.

Guideline 3 - Giving Advice to Investigators

All requests for advice by police investigators should be made in writing to the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions. This includes advice in relation to:

- (a) the availability of criminal charges, involving -
 - (i) the sufficiency of evidence;
 - (ii) the admissibility of evidence;
 - (iii) the most appropriate charge in the circumstances
- (b) the present state of the law with respect to a certain subject matter (where this requires detailed evaluation);
- (c) whether a matter should be disposed of summarily rather than on information;
- (d) the availability of an ex officio information; and appeal to the Supreme Court on sentence; a case stated or judicial review.

In the ordinary course these requests are to be answered in writing within a month. It should be the exception that the request is not made in writing.

There is no distinction to be drawn between "formal" and "informal" advice and "provisional" advice should not be given.

Should the person seeking advice be unable, due to the urgency of the matter, to seek advice by way of a written request, this should not preclude advice being provided. In such instances the written advice should recite the particular request made of this Office and the information provided upon which the advice is given.

In the ordinary course a letter confirming the oral advice should be dispatched within twenty four hours.

Where the request for advice relates to whether or not there is a basis for charging, any advice must only be provided after an examination of the complete police brief. Ordinarily such advice will only be given after the alleged offender has been provided with an opportunity to answer or comment upon the substance of the allegations (by interview or otherwise).

Advice will not be given on any individual exercise of police powers or on operational matters generally.

Requests for advice relating to matters of law which require a detailed evaluation or involve police or other investigative powers are to be referred to the Senior Solicitor or the manager of the Committal Unit.

The following requests for advice must be referred to the Director unless such matters have been specifically delegated to other officers:

- (a) whether or not a prosecution should proceed following a proposed extradition;
- (b) whether or not an immunity (indemnity or undertaking) should be granted;
- (c) whether or not an appeal should be lodged (including an application for judicial review);
- (d) whether or not a police officer should be prosecuted;
- (e) whether or not an ex officio information should be filed;
- (f) where the Director's or the Attorney-General's sanction or approval is required for the commencement of proceedings;
- (g) matters of particular sensitivity, including allegations of corruption or serious misconduct by any public official.

Where the charge is one of murder, manslaughter, assisted suicide or dangerous driving causing death, the prosecutor's advice is to be referred to the relevant manager for final consideration before it is communicated to the investigating officer.

Guideline No 4 - Ex Officio Information

To present an information in the absence of prior committal proceedings must be regarded as constituting a significant departure from accepted practice. Given that a purpose of committal proceedings is to filter out those cases where there is an insufficient basis for the accused being placed on trial, to indict in the absence of committal proceedings will deny the accused the opportunity of securing a discharge before the Magistrate.

A decision to indict in the absence of prior committal proceedings will only be justified if any disadvantage to the accused that may thereby ensue will nevertheless not be such as to deny the accused a fair trial. Further, such a decision will only be justified if there are strong and powerful grounds for so doing. An ex-officio information should not be presented in the absence of committal proceedings unless the evidentiary and public interest considerations outlined in the prosecution policy are satisfied.

Where an ex-officio information is presented in the absence of committal proceedings the accused will be provided with all relevant witness statements and full details of the case that the prosecution will present at the trial and any other material in accordance with disclosure principles.

On the other hand, a decision to indict notwithstanding the accused was discharged at the committal proceedings will not constitute as great a departure from accepted practice. The result of committal proceedings has never been regarded as binding on those who have the authority to indict. An error may have resulted in the Magistrate discharging the accused, and in such a case the filing of an ex-officio information may be the only feasible way that the error can be corrected. Nevertheless, a decision to indict following a discharge at the committal proceedings should never be taken lightly. An ex-officio information should not be presented in such cases unless it can be confidently asserted that the Magistrate erred in declining to commit, or fresh evidence has since become available and it can be confidently asserted that, if the evidence had been available at the time of the committal proceedings, the Magistrate would have committed the accused for trial. In the event that fresh evidence is received, consideration will be given to reinstating the committal proceedings.

Guideline No 5 - Declining to Proceed after Committal

After the accused has been committed for trial the question may arise whether the trial on that information should proceed. Pursuant to Section 7(1)(e) of the Act, the Director has power to enter a nolle prosequi or otherwise terminate a prosecution in appropriate cases.

Notwithstanding that a committal order has been obtained, events may have occurred after the committal that make it no longer appropriate for the prosecution to proceed. Alternatively, the strength of the prosecution case may be re-assessed having regard to the course of the committal proceedings. Where a question arises as to the exercise of the power under Section 7(1)(e), it is to be determined on the basis of the criteria governing the decision to prosecute set out earlier. In the normal course, any person or agency significantly affected will be consulted before any decision is made.

A defence application may be based on the fact that the offence charged is a relatively minor one and does not warrant the time and expense involved in a trial on information. Such an application is most unlikely to receive favourable consideration if the alleged offence is one that could have been determined summarily but the accused refused to consent to the matter being dealt with in that way.

Where a decision has been made not to proceed with a trial where an information has been laid, that decision will not be reversed unless:

- (a) significant fresh evidence has been produced that was not previously available for consideration;
- (b) the decision was obtained by fraud; or
- (c) the decision was based on a mistake of fact or law;

and in all the circumstances it is in the interests of justice that the decision be reversed.

Where a trial has ended with the disagreement of the jury, consideration should always be given to whether the circumstances require a re-trial, and whether a second jury is likely to be in a better position to reach a verdict. The seriousness of the alleged offence and the cost to the community and the accused should be taken into account. If it is decided to proceed with a re-trial and the second jury also disagrees, it will only be in rare and exceptional circumstances that the accused will be required to stand trial a third time.

Guideline No 6 - Immunity from Prosecution

The Director is empowered by Section 7(1)(f) of the Act to grant immunity from prosecution in appropriate cases. This power will normally be exercised in order to secure an accomplice's testimony for the prosecution.

A decision whether to call an accomplice to give evidence for the prosecution frequently presents conflicting considerations calling for the exercise of careful judgment in the light of all the available evidence. Inevitably, however, there will be instances where there is a weakness in the prosecution evidence that makes it desirable, or even imperative, for the prosecution to call an accomplice.

In conjunction with the question whether to call an accomplice the question may arise whether that accomplice should also be prosecuted. In this regard, unless the accomplice has been dealt with in respect of his or her own participation in the criminal activity the subject of the charge against the accused, he or she will be in a position to claim the privilege against self-incrimination in respect of the very matter the prosecution wishes to adduce in evidence. Where, however, an accomplice has been given an immunity under Section 7(1)(f) that immunity will override what would otherwise be an allowable claim of privilege.

In principle it is desirable that the criminal justice system should operate without the need to grant any concessions to persons who participated in alleged offences in order to secure their evidence in the prosecution of others (for example, by granting them immunity from prosecution). However, it has long been recognised that in some cases this course may be appropriate in the interests of justice. Nevertheless, an immunity under Section 7(1)(f) will only be given as a last resort. In this regard, as a general rule an accomplice should be prosecuted irrespective of whether he or she is to be called as a witness, subject of course to the usual evidentiary and public interest considerations being satisfied. Upon pleading guilty the accomplice who is prepared to co-operate in the prosecution of another can expect to receive a substantial reduction in the sentence that would otherwise have been appropriate. However, this course may not be practicable in some cases; for example, time may not permit charges against the accomplice to proceed to conviction before the trial of the principal offender, or there may be insufficient admissible evidence to support charges against the accomplice alone.

Apart from being a course of last resort, an immunity under Section 7(1)(f) of the Act will only be given provided the following conditions are met:

- (a) the evidence that the accomplice can give is considered necessary to secure the conviction of the accused, and that evidence is not available from other sources; and
- (b) the accomplice can reasonably be regarded as significantly less culpable than the accused.

The central issue in deciding whether to give an accomplice an immunity is whether in the overall interests of justice the prosecution of the accomplice should be foregone in order to secure that person's testimony in the prosecution of another. In determining where the balance lies, the following factors will be taken into account:

- (a) the significance to a successful prosecution of the evidence which it is hoped to obtain;
- (b) the degree of involvement of the accomplice in the criminal activity in question compared with that of the accused;
- (c) whether any inducement has been offered to the person concerned;
- (d) the character, credit and previous criminal record of any accomplice concerned;
- (e) whether the accomplice concerned made, or is prepared to make, full disclosure of all facts and matters within his or her knowledge.

When an accomplice receives any concession from the prosecution in order to secure his or her evidence, whether as to choice of charge or the granting of immunity from prosecution, the terms of the agreement or understanding between the prosecution and the accomplice should be disclosed to the court.

Guideline No 7 - Unrepresented Accused

The prosecutor must not advise an unrepresented accused on legal issues or the general conduct of the defence. In the event that there is evidence that the prosecutor intends leading that is arguably inadmissible this should be raised with the Trial Judge prior to the evidence being called.

All materials and witness statements must be provided in the usual manner and the accused should acknowledge receipt in writing.

Telephone communications should be kept to a minimum and recorded in writing immediately. All oral communications should be witnessed by a third party and noted in all cases. The notes should be kept on the file or with the brief.

In the event of a trial, the witnesses should be advised that the accused is unrepresented and advised of the procedures that will be adopted in the court.

Guideline No 8 - The Court Process

A prosecutor must not appear in a contested matter or an ex-parte action before a judicial officer where there may be an appearance of partiality.

A prosecutor must fairly assist the court to arrive at the truth, seek impartially to have the whole of the relevant and admissible evidence placed intelligibly before the court, and assist the court with submissions of law that enable the law to be properly applied to the facts.

A prosecutor must not, by language or other conduct, seek to inflame or bias the court against the accused.

A prosecutor must not argue any proposition of fact or law that is not reasonably open on the evidence and does not accurately represent the law. If there is contrary authority to the propositions being put to the court by the prosecutor, the court must be informed of them.

A prosecutor must call, as part of the prosecution case, all apparently credible witnesses whose evidence is relevant and admissible for the presentation of the complete factual case whether it supports the prosecution case or not unless:

- (a) the defence consents to the witness not being called;
- (b) the matter has been established by the calling of other evidence and there is no prejudice to the accused in not calling the witness;
- (c) the witness is, in the opinion of the prosecutor, plainly unreliable or untrustworthy;
- (d) the witness is unavailable due to serious illness, death or any other good reason.

In the event that the prosecutor declines to call a witness the defence must be informed as soon as reasonably practicable and where possible arrangements should be made to have the witness at court if the defence so request.

The prosecutor's right to challenge a juror should only be exercised if there is reasonable cause for doing so. It should never be exercised so as to attempt to select a jury that is not representative of the community as to age, sex, ethnic origin, religious belief, marital status, economic, cultural or social background.

Cross-examination of an accused as to credit or motive must be fairly conducted. Material put to an accused must be considered on reasonable grounds to be accurate and its use justified in the circumstances of the trial.

When addressing the jury or the court a prosecutor must not use inflammatory language and must at all times put an accurate and fair interpretation of the facts and the law. The prosecutor is expected to present the case fearlessly, vigorously and skillfully.

When appearing on sentence the prosecutor has an active role to play but must not seek to persuade the court to impose an improper sentence nor should a sentence of a particular magnitude be advocated. It is the duty of the prosecutor to adequately and fairly present the prosecution case on sentence and assist the court to avoid falling into appealable error.

To do this the prosecutor should where appropriate:

- (a) comply with Sections 7 and 7A of the Criminal Law (Sentencing) Act with respect to injury, loss or damage suffered by the victim;
- (b) tender the relevant antecedents of the accused;
- (c) correct any error of fact or law;
- (d) refer the court to any relevant authority or legislation that may assist in determining the appropriate sentence;
- (e) make submissions on the appropriate sentencing options that are available including non-custodial options;

- (f) acknowledge any co-operation of the accused with the law enforcement agencies when this has occurred and proved to be of value. This must be done in a manner that does not endanger the safety of the accused or prejudice the operations of those agencies.

Guideline No 9 - Disclosure

Disclosure to the defence, of material that is within the possession of the prosecuting authority is one aspect of the duty to ensure that the Crown case is presented with fairness to the accused. In South Australia the extent of the duty to disclose is determined by both statutory and common law principles.

Section 104 of the Summary Procedure Act 1921 requires the prosecution to file in the Magistrates Court in major indictable matters:

- (a) statements of witnesses for the prosecution on which the prosecutor relies as tending to establish the guilt of the accused;
- (b) copies of any documents on which the prosecutor relies as tending to establish the guilt of the accused;
- (c) a document describing any other evidentiary material on which the prosecutor relies as tending to establish the guilt of the accused together with a statement of the significance that the material is alleged to have;
- (d) any other material relevant to the charge that is available to the prosecution.

This section entails early disclosure and filing of all relevant admissible material irrespective of whether it assists the Crown case.

The common law requires wider disclosure than Section 104. The limits of this duty are not precisely delineated, but depend upon the circumstances of each case. Moreover, the duty to disclose is an ongoing one, and turns upon the matters that are realistically in issue at any time. It is acknowledged that material is often obtained or brought to the attention of the DPP, after the preliminary hearing. Prompt consideration will be given to the need to disclose such material. Furthermore, the DPP is committed to ensuring that the police deliver to the DPP a full brief, including sufficient information to enable this disclosure guideline to be properly implemented.

In the ordinary course on request disclosure will be made of the following in a prosecution for an indictable offence in the Supreme or District Court:

- (a) particulars of the accused's prior convictions;
- (b) copies of all written statements, and an opportunity to examine electronically recorded interviews of all witnesses to be called, together with a copy of any prior inconsistent statements of those witnesses;
- (c) copies of any written or electronically recorded statement obtained from the accused by a person in authority;
- (d) copies of any photographs, plans, documents or other representations which will be tendered by the prosecution at trial.
- (e) an opportunity to examine exhibits which will be tendered;
- (f) copies of statements of any expert witnesses to be called and the prosecution will facilitate an opportunity for a defence expert from the same or a similar discipline to speak with that expert, pre-trial;
- (g) copies of any warrant or any statutory authority used in the gathering of evidence to be adduced at trial;
- (h) an opportunity to inspect bank records, books of account or other records or documents relevant to the prosecution case which may not be introduced into evidence but be relied upon.

In any case where the prosecutor declines to call a witness, the defence should receive details of any material or statements which are or may be exculpatory. The defence should also receive details of the whereabouts of that witness and if requested, the prosecution should make that witness available for the defence to call.

However, the DPP recognises that a number of factors may be relevant to the extent of disclosure required in a particular prosecution. The prosecutor also has a number of obligations in relation to the material that comes into his or her possession. These obligations include a need to consider whether documents are within the power of the prosecution to disclose and whether there are any immunities or privilege that should be claimed by the prosecution or individuals.

In addition to the above the prosecutor should also consider the following factors in respect of any material for which disclosure is contemplated or requested:

- (a) whether the material is relevant;
- (b) whether the material may divulge the identity of an informer;
- (c) whether the material is subject to legal professional privilege;
- (d) whether the material could prejudice the investigation, or facilitate the commission, of other offences;
- (e) whether the material was supplied to the police, or other authority, upon an expectation that the material would remain confidential;
- (f) whether the material could divulge confidential police methods or the internal workings of the police, or other authorities;
- (g) whether the material relates to National or State security;
- (h) whether disclosure of the material could tend to endanger, prejudice, or embarrass any person;
- (i) whether there is any apparent, or demonstrated, legitimate forensic purpose for the defence to have access to the material.

The extent to which any of these factors will affect the decision whether or not to disclose particular material will vary. Application of these factors will always be subject to the over-riding duty to ensure that the Crown case is presented with fairness.

Guideline No 10 - Media Contact

No public comment is to be made without the Director's, or his designated representative's, approval in relation to matters that are the subject of criminal proceedings or that have been referred to the Office for an opinion in relation to potential criminal proceedings. All media contact should be referred to the Director's office.

Guideline No 11 - Vulnerable Witnesses

When dealing with witnesses under 16 years of age, a person who suffers from an intellectual disability, a victim of an alleged sexual offence or a person who is at some special disadvantage, consideration must be given to the provisions of Section 13 of the Evidence Act 1929. In cases where the section might apply, a witness should be advised of the options that are available under the Evidence Act including a screen, closed circuit television, a court companion and a closed court. If the section is applicable to a witness the application should be made after consulting with the witness where possible prior to the commencement of the trial.

The prosecutor with the conduct of the file should make the application notwithstanding any forensic advantage that is perceived in not making the appropriate arrangements.

Consideration must be given in the early stages of contact with the victim to involvement by the Witness

Assistance Service (WAS). If a witness wishes to have a court companion and is unable to obtain the services of a suitable person, the Witness Assistance Service will either make arrangements in consultation with the prosecutor or refer the witness to Victim Support Services.

Guideline No 12 - Victims of Crime

In all dealings with victims of crime due regard must be had by all members of the Office to the Declaration of Victim's Rights (Annexure A). This is a direction given by the Attorney-General pursuant to the Director of Public Prosecutions Act.

Consideration must be given in the early stages of contact with the victim, and/or their families, to involvement in the case by the Witness Assistance Service (WAS). In all appropriate cases they should be advised of the service provided by the WAS and where necessary referred to it. Contact will then be made by a Witness Assistance Officer (WAO) directly with the victim.

Information as to the proceedings and the victim's role must be given at an early stage and there is a continuing obligation to keep the victim informed. Where possible, information about the proceedings and the legal implications should be given by the prosecutor. An effort must be made to minimise the number of staff members with responsibility for contacting the victim and handling the file.

Parents of child victims must be given adequate information about the legal system and the impact upon children in order to make informed decisions. The views of parents or caregivers must always be given appropriate consideration by the prosecutor and where possible their views should be accorded significant weight. However, the public interest must at all times be the paramount consideration.

Prosecutors should ensure that an adequate victim impact statement has been prepared and that it contains relevant material to assist the Court in the sentencing process. They must also ensure that victims are aware of their right to present the statement orally if they wish. Victims should be advised of the procedure for giving the statement orally and appropriate arrangements made for them to do so.

Victims must be informed of the outcome of finalised court proceedings in a timely fashion.

Guideline No 13 - Victim Impact Statement

Victim impact statements (VIS) should be prepared prior to trial by the person who is eligible to submit it to the court. The statements may be in the written form or presented verbally to the court. Victims should be advised of their right to give a verbal presentation to the court. VIS should usually be prepared prior to the first arraignment. In the event of complex matters or cases in which the victims require further time they must be completed expeditiously so as not to delay the sentencing process.

A victim may prepare a statement to be read to the court. All victims must be advised of the following if they wish to prepare and submit this statement:

- (a) The statement must be prepared in writing and provided to the DPP. The statement will then be provided to the Sentencing Judge who will then appoint a time for it to be read to the court. It may be read by the victim or by a person nominated by the court;
- (b) the court will not be closed to the public (unless an order of the Court is made);
- (c) the prosecutor can apply for a closed court and/or a suppression order in appropriate cases;
- (d) the statement will not be disclosed to the defence prior to conviction unless it contains inconsistencies that go to a material matter. In the event of such inconsistencies the usual practice of disclosure should be adopted;
- (e) the victim may amend the statement at any time prior to it being read to the court;
- (f) the victim may withdraw the statement at any time in accordance with the Rules of Court.

A copy of the VIS will only be provided to defence counsel or to an unrepresented accused with an undertaking that the document is not reproduced in any way without the consent of the DPP. The document must be returned to the DPP upon request.

Guideline No 14 - Prosecution Appeals

The prosecution has a right to appeal in certain circumstances. This right will always be exercised with restraint and only where there is a reasonable prospect of success.

Appeals against sentence

In The Queen v Osenkowski (1982) 30 SASR 212 King CJ made the following observations concerning the role of prosecution appeals against sentence:

“It is important that prosecution appeals should not be allowed to circumscribe unduly the sentencing discretion of judges. There must always be a place for the exercise of mercy where a judge’s sympathies are reasonably excited by the circumstances of the case. There must always be a place for the leniency which has traditionally been extended even to offenders with bad records when the judge forms the view, almost intuitively in the case of experienced judges, that leniency at that particular stage of the offender’s life might lead to reform. The proper role for prosecution appeals in my view, is to enable the courts to establish and maintain adequate standards of punishment for crime, to enable idiosyncratic views of individual judges as to particular crimes or types of crime to be corrected, and occasionally to correct a sentence which is so disproportionate to the seriousness of the crime as to shock the public conscience.”

This passage is reflective of the care with which the Director of Public Prosecutions must approach the question whether to institute an appeal against sentence.

The prosecution’s right to appeal against sentence should be exercised sparingly, and it is the policy of the Director of Public Prosecutions not to institute such an appeal unless it can be asserted with some confidence that the appeal will be successful.

In considering a prosecution appeal against sentence it is to be borne in mind that the sentence for a specific offence will vary according to its nature, the circumstances of its commission, the antecedents of the prisoner, and the effect on the victim. Consequently, for any given offence there exists a range of legitimate penalty options. An appellate Court will not interfere with the exercise of a Judge’s or Magistrate’s sentencing discretion unless an error in the exercise of that discretion can be demonstrated. In practical terms the Court must be satisfied that the sentence imposed falls clearly outside the appropriate penalty range and may consequently be characterised as manifestly inadequate. Mere disagreement with the sentence passed is insufficient. The High Court decisions are clear that there must be a matter of principle to be established by the appeal in relation to the matter of the sentence Everett and Phillips v R [1994] 181 CLR 295.

Magistrates Appeals

The Office conducts appeals from the Magistrates Court to the Supreme Court on indictable offences. The prosecution has a right to appeal against acquittal where there has been an error of law or fact by the Magistrate. These appeals are only instituted on rare occasions and in accordance with the authorities. The same considerations apply to appeals against sentence brought by the prosecution for a sentence imposed by a Magistrate or a Judge. This was confirmed by the Full Court in Police v Cadd (1997) 69 SASR 150.

Case Stated

There is no right of appeal against a verdict of acquittal in the District or Supreme Court. However the prosecution can apply to the court during the trial or sentencing process, or after an acquittal, for the court to refer a question of law for consideration to the Full Court. This power should be exercised sparingly. The Director of Public Prosecutions should not seek to have a question of law referred to the Full Court unless it can be asserted with some confidence that the Court will answer the question in the manner sought by the prosecution. The question of law must be of sufficient importance to require the attention of the Full Court.

CONCLUSION

This statement does not attempt to cover all questions that can arise in the prosecution process and the role of the prosecutor in their determination. It is sufficient to state that throughout a prosecution the prosecutor must conduct himself or herself in a manner which will maintain, promote and defend the interests of justice, for in the final analysis the prosecutor is not a servant of government or individuals. He or she is a servant of justice. At the same time it is important not to lose sight of the fact that prosecutors discharge their responsibilities in an adversarial context. Accordingly, while the case must at all times be presented to the court fairly and justly, the community is entitled to expect that it will also be presented fearlessly, vigorously and skillfully.

This statement will be kept under review, and any changes will be made public.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS ACT 1991

An Act to establish the Office of Director of Public Prosecutions; to make consequential amendments to certain Acts; and for related purposes.

The Parliament of South Australia enacts as follows:

Short title

1. This Act may be cited as the Director of Public Prosecutions Act 1991.

Commencement

2. This Act will come into operation on a day to be fixed by proclamation.

Interpretation

3. In this Act—

"Director" means the Director of Public Prosecutions and includes a person acting in the position of Director of Public Prosecutions;

"Office" means the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Director of Public Prosecutions

4. (1) There will be a Director of Public Prosecutions.
 - (2) The Director will be appointed by the Governor.
 - (3) A person is not eligible for appointment as the Director unless he or she is a legal practitioner of at least seven years standing.
 - (4) The Director will be appointed—
 - (a) for a term of office of seven years; and
 - (b) on terms and conditions determined by the Governor.
 - (5) At the expiration of a term of office, the Director will be eligible for re-appointment.
 - (6) The Director must inform the Attorney-General in writing of—
 - (a) any direct or indirect pecuniary interest that the Director has or acquires in any business, or in any body corporate carrying on a business, in Australia or elsewhere; and
 - (b) any other direct or indirect interest that the Director has or acquires that conflicts, or may conflict, with the Director's duties.
 - (7) The Director must not—
 - (a) engage in legal practice outside the duties of his or her office; or
 - (b) engage, without the consent of the Attorney-General, in any other remunerated employment.
 - (8) The Governor may terminate the Director's appointment if the Director—
 - (a) is guilty of misbehaviour; or
 - (b) becomes physically or mentally incapable of carrying out official duties satisfactorily; or
 - (c) becomes bankrupt or applies to take the benefit of a law for the relief of bankrupt or insolvent debtors; or
 - (d) is absent, without leave of the Attorney-General, for 14 consecutive days, or for 28 days in any period of 12 months; or

(e) contravenes or fails to comply with subsection (6) or (7).

(9) Except as provided in subsection (8), the Director's appointment cannot be terminated.

Acting Director

5. (1) If the Director is temporarily absent, or the Director's position is temporarily vacant, the Attorney-General may assign a suitable person to act in the Director's position during the temporary absence or vacancy.

(2) A person is not eligible to act in the Director's position unless he or she is a legal practitioner of at least seven years standing.

(3) The terms on which a person is assigned to act in the Director's position will be as determined by the Attorney-General.

Office of the Director

6. (1) The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions is established.

(2) The Office consists of—

(a) the Director of Public Prosecutions; and

(b) any persons assigned under the Government Management and Employment Act 1986 to work in the Office.

(3) The Director has the administration and control of the Office.

* * * * *

Delegation

6A. The Director may, by instrument in writing, delegate to any suitable person any of the director's powers or functions under this Act but such a delegation—

(a) is revocable at will; and

(b) does not prevent the Director from acting personally in the matter.

Powers of Director

7. (1) The Director has the following powers:

(a) to lay charges of indictable or summary offences against the law of the State;

(b) to prosecute indictable or summary offences against the law of the State;

(c) to claim and enforce, either on behalf of the Crown or other persons, civil remedies that arise out of, or are related to, prosecutions commenced by the Director;

(d) to take proceedings for or in relation to the confiscation of profits of crime;

(da) to institute civil proceedings for contempt of court;

(e) to enter a nolle prosequi or otherwise terminate a prosecution in appropriate cases;

(f) to grant immunity from prosecution in appropriate cases;

(g) to exercise appellate rights arising from proceedings of the kind referred to above;

(h) to carry out any other function assigned to the Director by regulation;

- (i) to do anything incidental to the foregoing.
- (2) The Attorney-General may, by notice in the Gazette, transfer to the Director any powers or functions of the kind referred to above, or any power to consent to a prosecution, vested in the Attorney-General by an Act passed before the commencement of this Act.
- (3) A person who has power to consent to a prosecution, or to allow an extension of the period for commencing a prosecution, for an offence of a particular kind under the law of the State may, by notice in the Gazette, delegate that power to the Director.
- (4) A delegation under subsection (3)–
- (a) is revocable by subsequent notice in the Gazette; and
- (b) does not prevent the person from acting personally in a matter, but, once a decision on a particular matter has been made by the Director in pursuance of a delegation, the delegator is bound by that decision.
- (5) A document apparently signed by the Director and stating that the Director consents to a particular prosecution or that the Director allows a specified extension of the period for commencing a particular prosecution is to be accepted, in the absence of proof to the contrary, as proof of the fact so stated.
- (6) Where an information or complaint charging an offence is apparently signed by the Director or a person acting on the Director's authorisation, the information or complaint will, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be taken to have been duly signed by or on behalf of the Director.
- (7) In any legal proceedings, the Director may appear personally or may be represented by a member of the staff of the office who is a legal practitioner or by counsel or solicitor (including the Crown Solicitor or the Solicitor-General).
- (8) Details of any notices published under this section must be included in the Director's annual report.

Consultation

8. (1) The Director must, if requested to do so by the Attorney-General, consult with the Attorney-General with respect to the exercise of the Director's powers or functions.
- (2) The Attorney-General must, if requested to do so by the Director, consult with the Director with respect to the exercise of the Director's powers or functions.

Independence of Director

9. (1) Subject to this section, the Director is entirely independent of direction or control by the Crown or any Minister or officer of the Crown.
- (2) The Attorney-General may, after consultation with the Director, give directions and furnish guidelines to the Director in relation to the carrying out of his or her functions.
- (3) Directions or guidelines under this section–
- (a) must, as soon as practicable after they have been given, be published in the Gazette; and
- (b) must, within six sitting days after they have been given, be laid before each House of Parliament.

- (4) Subsection (3) need not be complied with in relation to directions or guidelines under this section relating to individual matters if, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, disclosure may be prejudicial to an investigation or prosecution, but, in that case, the directions or guidelines must be published in the Gazette, and laid before each House of Parliament, as soon as practicable after the matter is determined or otherwise completed.
- (5) If the Attorney-General is satisfied that disclosure under this section would place human life or safety at risk or cause some other form of severe prejudice to any person, the Attorney-General may withhold material from disclosure so far as necessary to avoid that consequence.

Investigation and report

10. The Commissioner of Police must, so far as it is practicable to do so, comply with any request from the Director to investigate, or report on the investigation of, any matter.

Directions and guidelines by Director

11. (1) The Director may give directions or furnish guidelines to the Commissioner of Police or other persons investigating, or prosecuting, offences on behalf of the Crown.
- (2) Any such directions or guidelines must be published in the Director's annual report.
- (3) If the Director is satisfied that publication of material under this section would place human life or safety at risk or cause some other form of severe prejudice to any person, the Director may withhold the material from publication so far as necessary to avoid that consequence.

Annual reports

12. (1) The Director must, before 30 September in each year, prepare and provide the Attorney-General with a report on the operations of the Office during the year that ended on the preceding 30 June.
- (2) The Attorney-General must have a copy of the report laid before each House of Parliament within six sitting days after the date of its receipt.
- (3) The Director may at any time report to Parliament on any matter affecting the proper carrying out of the functions of the Office.
- (4) The report must be given to the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the President of the Legislative Council and they must lay copies of the report before their respective Houses as soon as practicable after its receipt.

Saving provision

13. This Act does not derogate from the right of the Attorney-General to appear personally in any proceedings on behalf of the Crown.

Regulations

14. The Governor may make such regulations as are contemplated by this Act or as are necessary or expedient for the purposes of this Act.

SCHEDULE 1

Transitional Provisions

Retrospectivity

1. (1) This Act applies in relation to proceedings commenced before the commencement of this Act.
- (2) This Act applies in relation to offences committed before the commencement of this Act.

Director to take over from Attorney-General

2. Where, before the commencement of this Act, the Attorney-General had exercised, in relation to particular proceedings, a power or function of a kind vested in the Director under this Act, the Director may assume and continue to exercise that power or function as if it had been exercised by the Director from the inception of the proceedings.
